Algeria between Past and Present: Innovation and Reinvention of Higher Education

25th-26th April, 2017

CALL FOR PAPERS

The last few years have witnessed some rapid changes in both the form and nature of higher education. These changes have encouraged many international scholars concerned with higher education to revise both the purposes and functions of the university. Indeed, such new conditions have spotlighted the fact that universities have a wider set of obligations towards society, which goes beyond the mere rhetoric of mission statements. In Algeria, this current debate on “additional” responsibilities and duties of the university seems not to be taken into serious consideration. Yet, the educational system has been changed at least on paper and the LMD (Licence, Master, Doctorat) system is ongoing. So, what is happening at and/or to the Algerian university? Does it really meet the needs of the job market? What are the real issues that obstruct the effective implementation of the new system (LMD) with specific inclination to (foreign) language teaching? In an attempt to answer such questions and highlight the actual role of the Algerian university in providing the society with knowledgeable skillful citizens, this national conference is to be held in the light of such issues.
