From Crisis to Care: Interdisciplinary Approaches to Nature, Environment, and Environmental Change and Resilience

Call for Papers

Date: 10-11 December 2025

Location: University of 8 May 1945-Guelma

Nature and the environment, along with their ongoing transformations, remain essential subjects for scholars across disciplines. The evolving relationship between humanity and the natural world, especially in times of ecological crisis, demands fresh, interdisciplinary approaches to address the profound challenges and opportunities that lie ahead. This international conference, "Harmony in Flux," seeks to unite voices from diverse fields to explore and reimagine our understanding of the environment and our place within it.

In response to the rapidly changing ecological landscape, we aim to cultivate an inclusive and globally engaged platform for scholars, researchers, and environmental practitioners from across disciplines. Our discussions will engage deeply with themes from ecocriticism and environmental philosophy to sustainable development and indigenous knowledge, challenging participants to expand the dialogue on environmental ethics, activism, and global responsibility.

We invite proposals from disciplines including, but not limited to, environmental science, literature, ecology, philosophy, geography, law, art, economics, religious studies, and architecture. This conference will support the vital exchange of ideas necessary for addressing the most pressing environmental challenges of our time, integrating an earth-centered approach into cultural, literary, and scientific studies.
